Subject: update on watershed planning status

Hi all –

I thought some of you might appreciate an update on the watershed planning, since my last communication with you was on September 19th. I mentioned that the plan is now available for public review. It is on the watershed website: www.auxsablecreekwatershed.org as well as in a couple local libraries: Yorkville, Oswego, Minooka & Channahon.

My 9/19 e-mail anticipated a November public information meeting on the draft plan. However, I do not think this is the plan anymore. IEPA has been working to arrange this & had to cancel their tentative date. I have not heard of a new date. I will let you know when I have more information. Based on this change, I'd anticipate a follow up advisory committee meeting might not be until January, maybe even February.

In the meantime... here are some other watershed-related items that may interest you:

Certified Professional in Erosion and Sediment Control course is being offered on November 18th at DePaul University's Naperville Campus. The course is from 8:30 a.m. – 5 p.m. The instructor is John Price of Price and Company, Inc. from Grand Rapids, MI. If you would like registration information, please contact Stephanie Sheetz or Andrea Cline at The Conservation Foundation.

Stream Restoration Workshop is being offered for 2.0 CEUs on November 19-21, 2008 at IIT-Rice Campus located in Wheaton, Illinois. For registration information, click here & then Scroll Down to "Stream Restoration Course" under "Engineering and Manufacturing." For a course description, click here. This workshop is suited for federal, state, and municipal government personnel, park district, homeowner association boards, and not-for-profit organization staff members. Information on the instructor can be found by clicking here. Please contact Ted Gray at 630-261-1133 or TGray@LivingWatersConsultants.com if you need further information.
